

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image display apparatus and method which facilitate comparison of two or more images of an identical object. In one embodiment, three images to be compared are displayed at 5 matched positions on an image display after going through the position-matching process conducted by the position matching means, in which the vertical positions of a structural feature area (or a anatomical feature area) of the object are aligned horizontally.